A WOUNDED HEALER FOR A WOUNDED WORLD. On this, the second Sunday of Easter, the Gospel reading recounts the way that Jesus transformed a fearful group of disciples. "The doors were locked, where the disciples were, for fear of the Jews" (Jn 20:19). In the midst of this sad scene, Jesus greets them with the phrase, "Peace-with-you." This common expression, in Hebrew, shalom alekem, was a normal greeting among friends and neighbors in ancient Israel. Jesus' surprising presence makes this post-resurrection scene anything but normal, however. This has prompted some scholars to hear an eschatological nuance in his greeting: "Peace is now with you." The greeting is no longer a pious hope, but a declaration of fact. Jesus' death and resurrection has ushered in a new era in which peace is the possession of any disciple who believes. In other words, what this Gospel passage communicates is more than a consoling greeting in a time of fear. The passage reminds readers of every generation that those first disciples already had peace because the God of peace was with them even in locked-up rooms. Their fear is both real but also unnecessary, and Jesus makes that clear in his greeting, "You have peace." — Fr. Victor Cancino, SJ
